Counterculture Colophon
Grove Press, the Evergreen Review, and the Incorporation of the Avant-Garde
Loren Glass

Counterculture Colophon tells the story of how Grove Press and its house journal, The Evergreen Review, revolutionized the publishing industry and radicalized the reading habits of the “paperback generation.” It offers a new window onto the 1960s, from 1951, when Barney Rosset purchased the fledgling press for $3,000, to 1970, when the multimedia corporation into which he had built the company was crippled by a strike and feminist takeover.

“A riveting and highly entertaining narrative, Glass’s book offers a compelling new map of the world system of postwar literature, a map on which Paris and New York figure less as competing capitals than as the closest of trading partners. It provides a whole new perspective on the American literary scene of the 1950s, 60s, and 70s.”
—James F. English, University of Pennsylvania

The Sun Never Sets
Reflections on a Western Life
L.W. “Bill” Lane, Jr. with Bertrand M. Patenaude, Introduction by Kevin Starr

The Sun Never Sets tells the extraordinary story of L.W. “Bill” Lane, Jr., longtime publisher of Sunset magazine, pioneering environmentalist, and U.S. ambassador. Written with Stanford historian Bertrand Patenaude, this fascinating memoir traces Sunset’s profound impact on a new generation of Americans seeking opportunity and adventure in the great American West.

“Bill Lane was a one-of-a-kind terrific guy who lived an energetic and constructive life. This memoir is a compelling reminder that the sun never sets on Bill Lane.”
—George P. Shultz, Former U.S. Secretary of State and Distinguished Fellow, Hoover Institution, Stanford University

Tell This in My Memory

Stories of Enslavement from Egypt, Sudan, and the Ottoman Empire

Eve M. Troutt Powell

“Tell This in My Memory opens up a new window in the study of slavery in the modern Middle East, taking up personal narratives of slaves and slave owners to shed light on the anxieties and intimacies of personal experience. The framework of racial identity constructed through these stories proves instrumental in explaining how countries later confronted—or not—the legacy of the slave trade. Today, these vocabularies of slavery live on for contemporary refugees whose forced migrations often replicate the journeys and stigmas faced by slaves in the 19th century.”

—Michael Gomez, New York University

Having It All in the Belle Epoque
How French Women’s Magazines Invented the Modern Woman
Rachel Mesch
At once deeply historical and surprisingly timely, Having It All in the Belle Epoque shows how the debates that continue to captivate high-achieving women in America and Europe can be traced back to the early 1900s in France. The first two photographic magazines aimed at women, Femina and La Vie Heureuse created a female role model who—unlike the fear-inducing New Woman—could balance age-old feminine convention with new equalities. Often referred to simply as the “modern woman,” the feminine role model promoted in these magazines was a bundle of decidedly new contradictions, as she embraced a newfound sense of equality without completely abandoning conventional gender roles. Full of never before studied images of the modern French woman in action, Having it All shows how these early magazines exploited new photographic technologies, artistic currents, and literary trends to offer a powerful new model of French femininity—one that has exerted a lasting, if rarely recognized, influence on French expression.
“Mesch opens a window onto a distant and relatively unknown past, all the while shedding light on debates that are still very much alive today.”
