Hive Mind
How Your Nation’s IQ Matters
So Much More Than Your Own
GARETT JONES

Drawing on an expansive array of research from psychology, economics, management, and political science, Garett Jones argues that intelligence and cognitive skill are significantly more important on a national level than on an individual one. On average, people who do better on standardized tests are more patient, informed, and cooperative. As a result, these qualities become more prevalent in a society as national test scores rise. When we are surrounded by more patient, informed, and cooperative neighbors we become more like them. In other words, the worker bees in every nation create a “hive mind” with a power all its own.

Once the hive is established, each individual has only a tiny impact on his or her own life. After demonstrating how test scores that matter little for individuals can mean a world of difference for nations, Jones leaves readers with policy-oriented conclusions and hopeful speculation: If we can lift up the bottom and raise our global IQ, it is possible that this period of massive global inequality will be a short season by the standards of human history.
Global Talent
Skilled Labor as Social Capital in Korea
GI-WOOK SHIN AND JOON NAK CHOI

Global Talent seeks to examine the utility of skilled foreigners beyond their human capital value by focusing on their social capital potential, especially their role as transnational bridges between host and home countries.

Gi-Wook Shin and Joon Nak Choi empirically demonstrate their thesis by examining the case of Korea: a state archetypical of those that have been embracing economic globalization while facing a demographic crisis—and one where the dominant narrative on the recruitment of skilled foreigners is largely negative. They reveal the unique benefits that foreign students and professionals can provide to Korea by enhancing Korean firms’ competitiveness in the global marketplace and by generating new jobs for Korean citizens rather than taking them away. Further, they offer insights that extend well beyond the Korean experience.

SNAP Matters
How Food Stamps Affect Health and Well-Being
EDITED BY JUDITH BARTFELD, CRAIG GUNDERSEN, TIMOTHY M. SMEEDING, AND JAMES P. ZILIAK

In 2013, more than one in seven Americans received food stamp benefits from the Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program (SNAP), at a cost of nearly $80 billion. SNAP Matters brings together top scholars to ask and answer the questions that matter. What are the antipoverty effects of SNAP? Does SNAP cause obesity? To what extent does SNAP work in tandem with other assistance programs? The volume concludes that SNAP is highly responsive to macroeconomic pressures and is one of the most effective anti-poverty programs in the safety net, but that policymakers, students, and researchers need to continue examining this pillar of social assistance in America.

Sacrificing Families
Navigating Laws, Labor, and Love Across Borders
LEISY J. ABREGO

Widening global inequalities make it difficult for parents in developing nations to provide for their children, and parents often find that migration in search of higher wages is their only hope. Their dreams are straightforward: with more money, they can improve their children’s lives. But the reality of their experiences is often harsh, and structural barriers—particularly those rooted in immigration policies and gender inequities—prevent many from reaching their economic goals. Sacrificing Families offers a firsthand look at Salvadoran transnational families. It captures the tragedy of these families’ daily living arrangements, but also delves deeper to expose the structural context that creates and sustains patterns of inequality in their well-being. As free trade agreements expand and developed countries open doors for products and profits while closing them for refugees and migrants, these transnational families are becoming more common. Leisy Abrego gives voice to these immigrants and their families and documents the inequalities across their experiences.

Insufficient Funds
The Culture of Money in Low-Wage Transnational Families
HUNG CAM THAI

Every year migrants across the globe send more than five hundred billion dollars to relatives in their home countries. This circulation of money has important personal, cultural, and emotional implications for the immigrants and their family members alike. Insufficient Funds tells the story of how low-wage Vietnamese immigrants in the United States and their poor, non-migrant family members give, receive, and spend money. Extending beyond mere altruism, remittances are motivated by complex social obligations and the desire to gain self-worth despite migrants’ limited economic opportunities in the United States. At the same time, these acts raise expectations for standards of living, producing a cascade effect that monetizes family relationships. Insufficient Funds powerfully illuminates the new meanings and contradictions of money in an increasingly transnational world.

With so much knowledge of the risks that we face, why are we still unable to anticipate, prevent, and cope with them? In The Social Roots of Risk, Kathleen Tierney argues that risks and disasters of all types—and their consequences—are produced by the social order itself. This book leaves readers with a better understanding of how our own actions make us vulnerable to the next big crisis—and what we can do to prevent it.

The South African Gandhi
Stretcher-Bearer of Empire
ASHWIN DESAI AND GOOLAM VAHED

The South African Gandhi focuses on Gandhi’s first leadership experiences in South Africa and the complicated man they reveal—a man who actually supported the British Empire. Ashwin Desai and Goolam Vahed unveil a man who, throughout his stay on African soil, stayed true to Empire while showing a disdain for Africans. Gandhi’s racism was matched by his class prejudice towards the Indian indentured. He persistently claimed that they were ignorant and needed his leadership, and he wrote their resistances and compromises in surviving a brutal labor regime out of history. The South African Gandhi writes the indentured and working class back into history.

This meticulously researched book punctures the dominant narrative of Gandhi and uncovers an ambiguous figure whose time in Africa was marked by a desire to seek the integration of Indians, minus many basic rights, into the white body politic while simultaneously excluding Africans from his moral compass and political ideals.

The Good Life
Aspiration, Dignity, and the Anthropology of Wellbeing
EDWARD F. FISCHER
What could middle-class German supermarket shoppers buying eggs and impoverished Maya farmers in Guatemala harvesting coffee possibly have in common? Both groups are using the market in pursuit of the "good life." But what exactly is the good life? How do we define wellbeing beyond the material standards of living? While we may all want to live the good life, we differ widely on just what that entails. In The Good Life, Edward Fischer examines wellbeing by exploring very different cultural contexts in an attempt to tease out universal notions of the good life and how best to achieve it.

Drawing from his research in both Guatemala and Germany, this book is a richly layered attempt to better understand the key elements of the good life, which include aspiration, opportunity, dignity, and purpose.

¡Tequila!
Distilling the Spirit of Mexico
MARIE SARITA GAYTÁN
¡Tequila! Distilling the Spirit of Mexico traces how and why tequila became and remains Mexico's national drink and symbol. Starting in Mexico's colonial era and tracing the drink's rise through the present day, Marie Sarita Gaytán reveals the formative roles played by some unlikely characters. Although the notorious Pancho Villa was a teetotaler, his image is now plastered across the labels of all manner of tequila producers—he's even the namesake of a popular brand. Mexican films from the 1940s and 50s, especially Western comedies, buoyed tequila's popularity at home while World War II caused a spike in sales within the whisky-starved United States. Today, cultural attractions such as Jose Cuervo's Mundo Cuervo and the Tequila Express let visitors insert themselves into the Jaliscan countryside—now a UNESCO-protected World Heritage Site—and relish in the nostalgia of pre-industrial Mexico.

Wives, Husbands, and Lovers
Marriage and Sexuality in Hong Kong, Taiwan, and Urban China
EDITED BY DEBORAH S. DAVIS AND SARA L. FRIEDMAN
What is the state of intimate romantic relationships and marriage in urban China, Hong Kong, and Taiwan? Since the 1980s, many conventional expectations have been abandoned following the passage of no fault divorce laws, falling rates of childbearing within marriage, and increased tolerance for non-marital and non-heterosexual intimate relationships. Tracing how the marital "rules of the game" have changed across the region with the uneven retreat of state supervision and control, Wives, Husbands, and Lovers challenges the long-standing assumptions that marriage is the universally preferred status for all men and women in Chinese societies, that extramarital sexuality is incompatible with marriage, or that marriage necessarily unites a man and a woman. Read in dialogue, the chapters compellingly illustrate a new range of potential futures for marriage, sexuality, and family.

Rights, Deportation, and Detention in the Age of Immigration Control

TOM K. WONG

Rights, Deportation, and Detention in the Age of Immigration Control focuses on what is arguably the most contested, dynamic, and evolving set of immigration policies—immigration control—by analyzing state efforts to deter so-called “unwanted” immigration through the denial of rights to non-citizens, their physical removal and exclusion from the polity through deportation, and their deprivation of liberty and freedom of movement in immigration detention.

In addition to answering the question of why states do what they do, the book describes contemporary trends in immigration control, analyzes the determinants of these trends, and examines whether efforts to deter unwanted immigration are actually working.

We Are All Migrants

Political Action and the Ubiquitous Condition of Migrant-hood

GREGORY FELDMAN

Now more than ever, questions of citizenship, migration, and political action dominate public debate. In this powerful and polemical book, Gregory Feldman argues that We Are All Migrants. By challenging the division between those considered “citizens” and “migrants,” Feldman shows that both subjects confront disempowerment, uncertainty, and atomization. Yet, this very atomization—the ubiquitous condition of migrant-hood—pushes the individual to ask an existential and profoundly political question: “do I matter in this world?” Feldman argues that for particular individuals to answer this question affirmatively, they must be empowered to jointly constitute the places they inhabit with others.

Feldman ultimately argues that to overcome the condition of migrant-hood, people must be empowered to constitute their own sovereign spaces from their particular standpoints. Rather than base these spaces on categorical types of people, these spaces emerge only as particular people present themselves to each other while questioning how they should inhabit it.

SECOND EDITION

Servants of Globalization

Migration and Domestic Work

RHACEL SALAZAR PARREÑAS

Servants of Globalization offers a groundbreaking study of migrant Filipino domestic workers who leave their own families behind to do the caretaking work of the global economy. With this second edition, Rhacel Salazar Parreñas considers how the migrant communities have changed. Children have joined their parents. Male domestic workers are present in greater numbers. And, perhaps most troubling, the population has aged, presenting new challenges for the increasingly elderly domestic workers. New chapters discuss these three increasingly important constituencies. The entire book has been revised and updated, and a new introduction offers a global, comparative overview of the citizenship status of migrant domestic workers. Servants of Globalization remains the defining work on the international division of reproductive labor.

The Headscarf Debates
Conflicts of National Belonging
ANNA C. KORTEWEG AND GÖKÇE YURDAKUL

All countries promote national narratives that turn historical diversities into imagined commonalities, appealing to shared language, religion, history, or political practice. The Headscarf Debates explores how the headscarf has become a symbol used to reaffirm or transform these stories of belonging. Anna Korteweg and Gökçe Yurdakul focus on France, Germany, and the Netherlands—countries with significant Muslim-immigrant populations—and Turkey, a secular Muslim state with a persistent legacy of cultural ambivalence. The authors discuss recent cultural and political events and the debates they engender, enlivening the issues with interviews with social activists, and recreating the fervor that erupts near the core of each national identity when threats are perceived and changes are proposed.

The authors pay unique attention to how Muslim women speak for themselves and how their actions and statements reverberate throughout national debates. The third edition of this major work provides a systematic, comparative assessment of the efforts of a selection of major countries, including the U.S., to deal with immigration and immigrant issues—paying particular attention to the ever-widening gap between their migration policy goals and outcomes.

The DREAMers
How the Undocumented Youth Movement Transformed the Immigrant Rights Debate
WALTER J. NICHOLLS

The DREAMers investigates the youth movement that has transformed the national immigration debate, from its start in the early 2000s through the present day. Walter Nicholls draws on interviews, news stories, and firsthand encounters with activists to highlight the strategies used to bolster support for the DREAM Act that would allow them the legal right to stay in the United States. Through their story, Nicholls shows how stigmatized groups can gain a powerful voice in American politics.

The Last Best Place?
Gender, Family, and Migration in the New West
LEAH SCHMALZBAUER

Southwest Montana is beautiful country, evoking mythologies of freedom and escape long associated with the West. Partly because of its burgeoning presence in popular culture, film, and literature, including William Kittredge’s anthology The Last Best Place, the scarcely populated region has witnessed an influx of wealthy, white migrants over the last few decades. But another, largely invisible and unstudied type of migration is also present. Though Mexican migrants have worked on Montana’s ranches and farms since the 1920s, increasing numbers of migrant families—both documented and undocumented—are moving to the area to support its growing construction and service sectors.

The Last Best Place? asks us to consider the multiple racial and class-related barriers that Mexican migrants must negotiate in the unique context of Montana’s rural gentrification. These daily life struggles and inter-group power dynamics are deftly examined through extensive interviews and ethnography, as are the ways gender structures inequalities within migrant families and communities.

#iranelection
HashTag Solidarity and the Transformation of Online Life
NEGAR MOTTAHEDEH

As the Green Revolution gained protesters after Iran’s fraudulent 2009 presidential election, #iranelection became the first long-trending international hashtag. Texts, images, videos, audio recordings, and links connected protesters on the ground and netizens online, all simultaneously transmitting and living a shared international experience. This book follows the protest movement to investigate how emerging social media platforms developed international solidarity. Provocative and eye-opening, #iranelection reveals the new online ecology of social protest and offers a prehistory, of sorts, of the use of hashtags and trending topics, selfies and avatar activism, and citizen journalism and YouTube mashups.

The Emotional Politics of Racism
How Feelings Trump Facts in an Era of Colorblindness
PAULA IOANIDE

With stop-and-frisk laws, new immigration policies, and cuts to social welfare programs, majorities in the United States have increasingly supported intensified forms of punishment and marginalization against Black, Latino, Arab, and Muslim people in the United States, even as a majority of citizens claim to support “color-blindness” and racial equality. With this book, Paula Ioanide examines how emotion has prominently figured into these contemporary expressions of racial discrimination and violence, and how these widespread fears have played a central role in justifying the expansion of our military and prison system. But Ioanide also argues that within each of these cases there is opportunity for new mobilizations, for ethical witnessing: we must also popularize desires for justice and increase people’s receptivity to the testimonies of the oppressed by reorganizing embodied and unconscious structures of feeling.

Blinded by Sight
Seeing Race Through the Eyes of the Blind
OSAGIE K. OBASOGIE

How do blind people understand race? To many, the answer seems obvious: they don’t. This has led to the emergence of colorblindness—that law and public policy can replicate the blind community’s apparent racial harmony by not “seeing” or acknowledging race. This has radically reshaped post-civil rights race discussions.

The findings in Blinded by Sight are startling: blind people understand race visually and it shapes their everyday lives—just like anyone else. By debunking this illusory racial utopia, Obasogie provides a new vision for law and society.

“Blinded by Sight is a completely fresh, eye-opening perspective on the social construction of race. By showing that blind people understand race visually, Obasogie illuminates how everyone learns to ‘see’ race, powerfully debunking two dominant racial dogmas—that race is visually obvious and our laws should be colorblind. His fascinating study and path breaking analysis make an innovative contribution.”

Race on the Move
Brazilian Migrants and the Global Reconstruction of Race
TIFFANY D. JOSEPH

Race on the Move takes readers on a journey from Brazil to the United States and back again to consider how migration between the two countries is changing Brazilians’ understanding of race relations. Given the growing Latino and multiracial populations in the United States, the use of quotas to address racial inequality in Brazil, and the flows of people between each country, contemporary race relations in each place are starting to resemble each other.

Tiffany Joseph interviewed residents of Governador Valadares, Brazil’s largest immigrant-sending city to the U.S., to ask how their immigrant experiences have transformed local racial understandings. Joseph identifies and examines a phenomenon—the transnational racial optic—through which migrants develop and ascribe social meaning to race in one country, incorporating conceptions of race from another. Analyzing the bi-directional exchange of racial ideals through the experiences of migrants, Race on the Move offers an innovative framework for understanding how race can be remade in immigrant-sending communities.

Letters of the Law
Race and the Fantasy of Colorblindness in American Law
SORA Y. HAN

In Letters of the Law, Sora Han argues that colorblindness is a foundational fantasy of law that not only informs individual and collective ideas of race—but also structures the imaginative capacities of American legal interpretation. By deconstructing the law’s central doctrines on due process, citizenship, equality, punishment and individual liberty, Han exposes how racial slavery and the ongoing struggle for abolition continue to haunt the law’s reliance on the fantasy of colorblindness.

Letters of the Law provides highly original readings of iconic Supreme Court cases on racial inequality—spanning Japanese internment, affirmative action, prisoner rights, Jim Crow segregation, and sexual freedom. Han’s analysis provides readers with new perspectives on many urgent social issues of our time. But more importantly, Han compels readers to reconsider how the diverse legacies of civil rights reform archived in American law might be rewritten as a heterogeneous practice of black freedom struggle.

All I Want Is a Job!
Unemployed Women Navigating the Public Workforce System
MARY GATTA

All I Want Is a Job! puts a human face on workforce development policy. An ethnographic sociologist, Mary Gatta went undercover as a client in a New Jersey One-Stop Career Center. One-Stop Centers, developed as part of the federal Workforce Investment Act, are supposed to be an unemployed worker’s go-to resource on the way to re-employment. But, with swarms of new clients coming through their doors, are these centers fit for the task of pairing America’s workforce with new jobs? Weaving together her own account with interviews of jobless women and caseworkers, Gatta offers a revealing glimpse of the toll that unemployment takes and the realities of social policy. Women, she argues, are particularly vulnerable in the current economy, since they are routinely paid less than their male counterparts. Drawing on tales from the frontlines, Gatta highlights the promise and weaknesses of One-Stop Career Centers and recommends key shifts in workforce policy.

Foreclosed America
ISAAC WILLIAM MARTIN AND CHRISTOPHER NIEDT

From 2007 to 2012, almost five percent of American adults—about ten million people—lost their homes because they could not make mortgage payments. The scale of this home mortgage crisis is unprecedented. The dispossession and forced displacement of American families affect their health, educational success, and access to jobs. The combined impact continues to block any real recovery in the hardest-hit communities.

While we now know a lot about how this crisis affected the global economy, we still know very little about how it affected the people who lost their homes. Foreclosed America offers the first representative portrait of those people—who they are, how and where they live after losing their homes, and what they have to say about their finances, their neighborhoods, and American politics. It is a sobering picture of Americans down on their luck and of a crisis that is testing American democracy.

Transforming Racial Fiction into Ethnic Factions
VILNA BASHI TREITLER

In The Ethnic Project, Vilna Bashi Treitler traces the histories of immigrant and indigenous groups in the United States. She shows how they negotiate America’s racial hierarchy, aiming to distance themselves from the bottom and align with the groups already at the top. But in pursuing these “ethnic projects” these groups implicitly accept and perpetuate a racial hierarchy, shoring up rather than dismantling race and racism.

Gruesome Spectacles
Botched Executions and America’s Death Penalty
AUSTIN SARAT
Gruesome Spectacles uncovers the history of botched, mismanaged, and painful executions that took place in America from 1890 to 2010. During this time, an estimated three percent of all American executions were botched in one way or another. Austin Sarat, author and renowned expert on the death penalty, recounts the stories of some of the men and women who have died when our technologies of death misfired—stories obscured by history, and to some extent by the popular press.

Chronicling the American desire to harness technical efficiency in the service of capital punishment, Sarat narrates our continued effort to “perfect” state killing in the twentieth century as the country debated the advantages of hanging, electrocution, the gas chamber, and lethal injection. He shows how executions have gone dreadfully wrong as we moved from one method of death to another.

A Society of Young Women
Opportunities of Place, Power, and Reform in Saudi Arabia
AMÉLIE LE RENARD
The cities of Saudi Arabia are among the most gender-segregated in the world, but in recent years the Saudi government has felt increasing international pressure to offer greater roles for women in society. Implicit in these calls for reform, however, is an assumption that the only “real” society is male society. Little consideration has been given to the rapidly evolving activities within women’s spaces. This book joins young urban women in their daily lives to show how these women are transforming Saudi cities from within and creating their own urban, professional, consumerist lifestyles.

As young Saudi women are emerging as an increasingly visible social group, they are shaping new social norms. Their shared urban spaces offer women the opportunity to shed certain constraints and imagine themselves in new roles. But to feel included in this peer group, women must adhere to new constraints: to be sophisticated, fashionable, feminine, and modern.

Colored Television
American Religion Gone Global
MARLA F. FREDERICK
The presence of women and African Americans not simply as viewers, but also as televangelists and station owners in their own right has dramatically changed the face of American religious broadcasting in recent decades. Colored Television looks at the influence of these ministries beyond the United States, where complex gospels of prosperity and gospels of sexual redemption mutually inform one another while offering hopeful yet socially contested narratives of personal uplift. As an ethnography, Colored Television illuminates the phenomenal international success of American TV preachers like T.D. Jakes, Creflo Dollar, Joyce Meyer, and Juanita Bynum. Focusing particularly on Jamaica and the Caribbean, it also explores why the genre has resonated so powerfully around the world. Investigating the roles of producers, consumers, and distributors, Marla Frederick takes a unique look at the ministries, the communities they enter, and the global markets of competition that buffer them.

Pregnant with the Stars
Watching and Wanting the Celebrity Baby Bump
RENNÉE ANN CRAMER

Magazines, television shows, and blogs are awash with gossip and speculation about pregnant celebrities. What drives our cultural obsession with celebrity baby bumps? Pregnant with the Stars examines the American fascination with, and judgment of, celebrity pregnancy, and exposes how our seemingly innocent interest in "baby bumps" actually reinforces troubling standards about femininity, race, and class, while increasing the surveillance and regulation of all women in our society.

Renée Ann Cramer exposes how cultural ideas like the "rockin' post-baby body" are not only unattainable; they are a means of social control. Combining cultural and legal analysis, she uncovers a world where pregnant celebrities are governed and controlled alongside the recent, and troubling, proliferation of restrictive laws aimed at women in the realm of reproductive justice and freedom. Cramer asks each reader and cultural consumer to recognize that the seeing, judging, and discussion of the "baby bump" isn't merely frivolous celebrity gossip—it is an act of surveillance, commodification, and control.

Community at Risk
Biodefense and the Collective Search for Security
THOMAS D. BEAMISH

In Community at Risk, Thomas D. Beamish examines the diverse civic responses to local universities’ plans to develop National Biocontainment Laboratories in three communities: Roxbury, MA; Davis, CA; and Galveston, TX. At a time when the country’s anxiety over its security had peaked, reactions to the biolabs ranged from vocal public opposition to acceptance and embrace. Beamish argues that these divergent responses can be accounted for by the civic conventions, relations, and virtues specific to each locale. Together, these elements clustered, providing a foundation for public dialogue. In contrast to conventional micro- and macro-level accounts of how risk is perceived and managed, Beamish’s analysis of each case reveals the pivotal role played by meso-level contexts and political dynamics. Community at Risk provides a new framework for understanding risk disputes and their prevalence in American civic life.

Protest Dialectics
State Repression and South Korea’s Democracy Movement, 1970–1979
PAUL Y. CHANG

The 1970s is characterized by many as the “dark age for democracy” in South Korea. In this groundbreaking work, Paul Y. Chang highlights the importance of state repression in shaping mobilization in this oft-ignored decade. Protest Dialectics provides readers with an in-depth analysis of the emergence and evolution of the democracy movement in a highly authoritarian context, and shows how activists in the 1970s planted the seeds for the vibrant democracy South Korea enjoys today.

“This important book gives the 1970s democratization movement in South Korea the recognition it deserves. Chang shows that while the working-class movement was a vital element, Christians, white-collar workers, and particularly lawyers and journalists, gave rise to the discourse of human rights, forming the moral backbone of the democratization movement.”

How Culture Shapes the Climate Change Debate
ANDREW J. HOFFMAN

Though the scientific community largely agrees that climate change is underway, debates about this issue remain fiercely polarized. These conversations have become a rhetorical contest, one where opposing sides try to achieve victory through playing on fear, distrust, and intolerance. At its heart, this split no longer concerns carbon dioxide, greenhouse gases, or climate modeling; rather, it is the product of contrasting, deeply entrenched worldviews. This brief examines what causes people to reject or accept the scientific consensus on climate change. Synthesizing evidence from sociology, psychology, and political science, Andrew J. Hoffman lays bare the opposing cultural lenses through which science is interpreted. He then extracts lessons from major cultural shifts in the past to engender a better understanding of the problem and motivate the public to take action. How Culture Shapes the Climate Change Debate makes a powerful case for a more scientifically literate public, a more socially engaged scientific community, and a more thoughtful mode of public discourse.

Gaining Freedoms
Claiming Space in Istanbul and Berlin
BERNA TURAM

Gaining Freedoms reveals a new locus for global political change: everyday urban contestation. Through proximity, neighborhoods, streets, and squares can create unconventional power contestations over lifestyle and consumption. And through struggle, negotiation, and cooperation, competing claims across groups can become platforms to defend freedom and rights from government encroachments.

Drawing on more than seven years of fieldwork in three contested urban sites—a downtown neighborhood and a university campus in Istanbul, and a Turkish neighborhood in Berlin—Berna Turam shows how democratic contestation echoes through urban space. Countering common assumptions that Turkey is strongly polarized between Islamists and secularists, she illustrates how contested urban sites create new alliances out of conflict.

Building Blocs
How Parties Organize Society
EDITED BY CEDRIC DE LEON, MANALI DESAI, AND CIHAN TUĞAL

Do political parties merely represent divisions in society? Until now, scholars and other observers have generally agreed that they do. But Building Blocs argues the reverse: that some political parties in fact shape divisions as they struggle to remake the social order. Drawing on the contributors’ expertise in Indonesia, India, the United States, Canada, Egypt, and Turkey, this volume demonstrates further that the success and failure of parties to politicize social differences has dramatic consequences. This politicization of divisions, or “political articulation,” is a constant call and response between parties and would-be constituents. When articulation becomes inconsistent, as it has in Indonesia, partisan calls grow faint and the resulting vacuum creates the possibility for other forms of political expression. However, when political parties exercise their power of interpellation efficiently, they are able to silence certain interests such as those of secular constituents in Turkey. Building Blocs exposes political parties as the most influential agencies that structure social cleavages and invites further critical investigation of the related consequences.

The Size of Others’ Burdens
Barack Obama, Jane Addams, and the Politics of Helping Others
ERIK SCHNEIDERHAN

Americans have a fierce spirit of individualism. We pride ourselves on self-reliance, on bootstrapping our way to success. Yet, we also believe in helping those in need, and we turn to our neighbors in times of crisis. The tension between these competing values is evident, and how we balance between these competing values holds real consequences for community health and well-being.

In The Size of Others’ Burdens, Erik Schneiderhan explores these competing pressures through the stories of two famous Americans—Jane Addams and Barack Obama. The parallels between the two are remarkable—Chicago activists-turned-politicians, University of Chicago lecturers, gifted orators, crusaders against discrimination, winners of the Nobel Peace Prize.

Through their stories, Schneiderhan highlights the value of combining today’s state resources with the innovation and flexibility of Addams’s time to encourage community building. Developing present-day lessons for improving our communities and offering a call to action, this book inspires readers to address their own American dilemma and connect to community, starting in their own neighborhoods.

State and Agents in China
Disciplining Government Officials
YONGSHUN CAI

Chinese government officials have played a crucial role in China’s economic development, but they are also responsible for severe problems, including environmental pollution, violation of citizens’ rights, failure in governance, and corruption. How does the Chinese Party-state respond when a government official commits a duty-related malfeasance or criminal activity? State and Agents in China explores how the party-state addresses this dilemma, uncovering the rationale behind the selective disciplining of government officials and its implications for governance in China.

“This is an important book about an important problem for authoritarian states. Yongshun Cai investigates the empirical pattern of discipline in contemporary China, drawing our attention to cost considerations that mediate sanctioning choices and illuminating the crucial functions of uncertainty and flexibility in effective sanctioning and local policy innovation.”

Globalizing Knowledge
Intellectuals, Universities, and Publics in Transformation
MICHAEL D. KENNEDY

Globalizing Knowledge introduces the stakes of globalizing knowledge before examining how intellectuals and their institutions and networks shape and are shaped by globalization and world-historical events from 2001 through the uprisings of 2011–13. But Kennedy is not only concerned with elaborating how wisdom is maintained and transmitted, he also asks how we can recognize both interconnectedness and inequalities, and possibilities for more knowledgeable change within and beyond academic circles. Subsequent chapters are devoted to issues of public engagement, the importance of recognizing difference and the local’s implication in the global, and the specific ways in which knowledge, images, and symbols are shared globally. Kennedy considers numerous case studies, from historical happenings in Poland, Kosovo, Ukraine, and Afghanistan, to today’s energy crisis, Pussy Riot, the Occupy Movement, and beyond, to illuminate how knowledge functions and might be used to affect good in the world.

Remaking College
The Changing Ecology of Higher Education
EDITED BY MICHAEL W. KIRST AND MITCHELL L. STEVENS

Between 1945 and 1990 the United States built the largest and most productive higher education system in world history. Over the last several decades, however, dramatic budget cuts to public academic services and skyrocketing tuition have made college completion more difficult for many. Nevertheless the democratic promise of education and the global competition for educated workers mean ever-growing demand. Remaking College considers this changing context, arguing that a growing accountability revolution, the push for greater efficiency and productivity, and the explosion of online learning is dramatically changing the character of higher education.

Writing from a range of disciplines and professional backgrounds, the contributors each bring a unique perspective to the fate and future of U.S. higher education. They imagine a future unencumbered by dominant notions of the “traditional” student, linear models of student achievement, and college as a four-year residential experience.

Inequality in the Promised Land
Race, Resources, and Suburban Schooling
R. L’HEUREUX LEWIS-MCCOY

Nestled in neighborhoods of varying degrees of affluence, suburban public schools are typically better resourced than their inner-city peers and known for their extracurricular offerings and college preparatory programs. Despite the glowing opportunities that many families associate with suburban schooling, accessing a district’s resources is not always straightforward, particularly for black and poorer families. Moving beyond class- and race-based explanations, Inequality in the Promised Land focuses on the everyday interactions between parents, students, teachers, and school administrators in order to understand why resources seldom trickle down to a district’s racial and economic minorities.

“In this important new book, Lewis-McCoy reminds us that as America’s suburbs have become increasingly diverse, the challenge of providing all children with access to a high quality education has not gone away.”

The Schooled Society
The Educational Transformation of Global Culture
DAVID P. BAKER

David Baker argues that the education revolution of the past 150 years has transformed our world into a society that is created and defined by education. The Schooled Society shows how mass education interjects itself and its ideologies into culture at large: from the dynamics of social mobility, to how we measure intelligence, to the values we promote.

Theorizing in Social Science
The Context of Discovery
EDITED BY RICHARD SWEDBERG

Theorizing in Social Science introduces the reader to the next generation of theory construction and suggests useful ways for creating social theory.

What makes certain types of theories creative, and how does one go about theorizing in a creative way? The contributors to this landmark collection—top social scientists in the fields of sociology, economics, and management—draw on personal experiences and new findings to provide a range of answers to these questions. Some turn to cognitive psychology and neuroscience, others encourage greater dialogue between the arts and sciences, while still others focus on the ways observation leads to conceptualization. Taken together, the chapters collectively encourage a shift in the place of theory in social science today. Appealing to students and scientists across disciplines, this collection will inspire innovative approaches to producing, teaching, and learning theory.

Pious Practice and Secular Constraints
Women in the Islamic Revival in Europe
JEANETTE S. JOUILI

Pious Practice and Secular Constraints chronicles the everyday ethical struggles of women active in orthodox and socially conservative Islamic revival circles as they are torn between their quest for a pious lifestyle and their aspirations to counter negative representations of Muslims within the mainstream society.

Jeanette S. Jouili conducted fieldwork in France and Germany to investigate how pious Muslim women grapple with religious expression. Her analysis stresses the various ethical dilemmas the women confronted in negotiating these religious duties within a secular public sphere. In conversation with Islamic and Western thinkers, Jouili teases out the important ethical-political implications of these struggles, ultimately arguing that Muslim moral agency, surprisingly reinvigorated rather than hampered by the increasingly hostile climate in Europe, encourages us to think about the contribution of non-secular civic virtues for shaping a pluralist Europe.

Faith as an Option
Possible Futures for Christianity
HANS JOAS

Many people these days regard religion as outdated and are unable to understand how believers can intellectually justify their faith. Nonbelievers have long assumed that progress in technology and the sciences renders religion irrelevant. Believers, in contrast, see religion as vital to society’s spiritual and moral well-being. But does modernization lead to secularization? Does secularization lead to moral decay? Sociologist Hans Joas argues that these two supposed certainties have kept scholars from serious contemporary debate and that people must put these old arguments aside in order for debate to move forward. The emergence of a “secular option” does not mean that religion must decline, but that even believers must now define their faith as one option among many.

In this book, Joas spells out some of the consequences of the abandonment of conventional assumptions for contemporary religion and develops an alternative to the cliché of an inevitable conflict between Christianity and modernity.
